Dear Ed,

I hesitate to estimate how many letters in arrears I must be. But you must appreciate that after the deluge of mail from you I have been busy. The contents have been most interesting and enlightening. I shall be pleased to return all of these to you at a future date. It is not certain when someone will see you, but I do hope sometime before Christmas. At that time perhaps you can clarify some questions that have arisen since our last meeting. Be assured that the number of questions will not in any way be nearly as numerous as during our busy quarterback session.

How did Juris make out on his Madrid trip? I shall be interested in hearing about your continuing success as a coach. According to the newspapers some of our friends will be playing basketball in your town later next month. I would not want you to particularly go out of your way to meet them. It would be better if Juris carried the ball or not at all.

My colleagues join me in wishing you a successful season.

Yours truly,
